

NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE

SKYWARN PROGRAM

WALPOLE PUBLIC LIBRARY,

COMMUNITY ROOM,

School and Stone Street

MAY 11th, 7-9:30 PM

Are you prepared for the next weather event?

Do you know that most emergency are weather related?

The National Weather Service is offering a free informative presentation on severe and unusual weather that frequents our area. This updated and fast moving program will provide the latest information on hurricanes, tornadoes, flooding, severe cold and heat events, winter storms, thunder storms and more.

Keeping an eye to the sky and observing cloud formations may be your only warning of an impending weather event. This presentation will train attendees on what to look for and how to react. As an informed and prepared citizen, you can help to protect yourself and your family; another step toward a more resilient and a safer community.

You will also have an opportunity to become a SKYWARN spotter and learn what information the National Weather Service is looking for and how to report your observations. This program meets the SKYWARN re-certification requirements.

This program is free and open to the public. Pre-registration is not required but desired by calling 508-660-7321.

For further information please contact Roger Turner - Walpole EMA Director, at 508-660-7365.

This program is sponsored by Walpole Emergency Management, the Walpole CERT program, Walpole ECOMM group and the Walpole Medical Reserve Corps.
